

CURED BY FAITH.

A young man named Conover, living near Petersburg, W. Va., had a severe attack of the measles. His grandmother, anxious to effect a speedy cure, placed him between two beds with feathers with hot stones at his feet. This was so effective that the youth died a few hours afterward.

Mr. Lewis Scribner, an advocate of the common sense of faith healing, is said to have effected some remarkable cures in the western part of Missouri. The most notable one is that of James Donovan, an aged resident of Missouri City, Indiana. Mr. Donovan had kept him in bed for more than a year, but he is now as active as any man of 40. Mr. Scribner cures patients by simply reading the Bible to them and praying for their recovery.

W. W. Pennington, a well known merchant of Danville, Ky., was given up by his physicians a month ago, and left to die. He had been afflicted with an unknown disease, which caused him a severe, dragging, and the most excruciating pain. After the physicians had failed to cure him, he was taken to the home of Mrs. J. H. Jones, who had been cured of a similar ailment. She had her husband lie on his back, and she read the Bible to him, and he was cured. He is now as active as any man of 40.

Mr. J. H. Jones, the president of the National Association of the Resolute Sons of New Orleans, has caused considerable agitation among the people of the city by his bold and unorthodox cures. It is reported that several prominent men who had lost confidence in the ability of their physicians to cure their ailments, applied to the reverend father and were cured. This was followed by the application of a certain miraculous power to the hands of the priest, which caused the people to have been afflicted in a number of instances, but because of their unbelief, they were not cured. The reverend father, however, has been cured, thereby the archbishop has been cured. Mr. Jones has been leading a life of prayer and fasting.

A remarkable instance of an invalid's recovery through faith is reported from Euclid, Ohio. Miss Sarah Poole, the daughter of a prominent family, having just out of school, had been bedridden for thirty years. She had been cured of a similar ailment, and she had been cured. She is now as active as any man of 40.
